Now You Can Face Critical Physician Staffing Challenges With Confidence...

In the mid 90s a surplus of 165,000 physicians was predicted by the year 2000. Fast forward to 2007- experts now say the country needs to train 3,000-10,000 physicians per year to meet the needs of a growing population that is older and needs more medical care. Many physicians in the present environment, have become less willing to take night and weekend call due to a greater desire to balance work and family life and declining reimbursement.

So, as a medical administrator, how do you meet these physician staffing challenges?

A well-qualified locum tenens physician can help. Keep your permanent staff intact so you can continue to effectively serve your patients. Call us to discuss how our single point of contact, locum tenens staffing option can solve your physician staffing problems.
